E-Journals for the sciences

- Access the e-journals via the Discover button on our homepage:

- Log in using your DCnumber@student.don.ac.uk and usual computer password:

- Click on the A-Z journals Catalogue link
You can now search for a particular journal title or use a keyword to find journals on a particular subject:

Many journals are hosted on databases such as Academic Search Elite or General Onefile. The A-Z searches these databases to find the title or subject you are looking for.

Finding a particular journal:

New Scientist

This title is available via the database Academic Search Elite.

There is an embargo of 1 month.

It is also available in paper form on the display shelves in the LRC – we keep it for 2 months.
We have access to Nursing Standard via the databases Academic Search Elite and General Onefile.

It is also available in paper form in the LRC.

Chemistry Review is available via the database General Onefile - coverage is for 1999-2011.

The paper copies run from Jan 2011 to present.
Once you have found the journal you want, click on the link to the database to see articles from it.

The next screen shows you which issues you can look at.

Biological Sciences Review can be accessed on General Onefile from 1999-2011.

We have the paper copies for two years.
Click on one of the dates to see the issues for that month or year.

By clicking on one of the dates, you can see all the articles which appeared in that issue of the journal.

Click on the PDF full text link to look at an article.
From here, you can print off the article; e-mail it to yourself or save it using the buttons on the right hand side.